

Carol Conover Named Chairman Of Asia Week New York

NEW YORK CITY — Carol Conover, director of Kaikodo, a New York-based gallery, has been named the new chairman of Asia Week New York — the collaboration of international Asian art specialists, five major auction houses, museums and Asian cultural institutions that will take place throughout metropolitan New York from March 14 to 22.

Said Conover, "I am honored to accept the position of chairman of Asia Week New York and look forward to continuing the successful paths forged by my colleagues, as well as collaborating with the distinguished roster of world-renowned Asian art specialists — from ancient to contemporary. As plans for our sixth year take shape, there will be much exciting news to announce."

One such announcement pertains to the host venue which, traditionally, is held at important cultural institutions in New York. Last year's reception was conducted at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, while others have taken place at the Morgan Library, the Rubin Museum of Art and Asia Society.

The weeklong celebration is filled with simultaneous gallery open houses, Asian art auctions as well as numerous museum exhibitions, lectures and special events.

Participants from Australia, England, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Switzerland and the United States unveil an array of treasures from China, India, the Himalayas, Southeast Asia, Tibet, Nepal, Japan and Korea.
